As a Film Major will; demonstrate fundamental aesthetically-driven skills essential to 16 mm filmmaking and/or digital media production, develop films grounded in ethical storytelling and production processes, apply creative problem-solving and collaborative practices in their work and synthesize knowledge and skills through the creation and completion of short films.

Steeped within the traditions of independent filmmaking, students learn the fundamentals of fiction and non-fiction film production techniques through a production-based program inspired by independent motion picture production and creative avenues through evolving digital technologies. Our curriculum integrates hands-on production work with film studies grounded in a liberal arts education that fosters ethical storytellers who artfully explore the human condition in creative ways.
