This course is an introduction to the history of the Modern Middle East. It covers the main events that shaped the region from the final years of the Ottoman empire, through the creation of the nation-states by Western colonialism, to the struggles for independence and decolonization. Tracing the developments since then, we end with the recent revolutions and the current situation in the region.