A call for conference

Decolonizing Identities: Race, Gender, and Indigeneity

History Students Association
SF State University, San Francisco
3 March 2018

The History Students Association at San Francisco State University invites you to our 2nd Annual Interdisciplinary Conference to be held at the SF State Campus on March 3, 2018.

The theme for the 2018 Conference will be “Decolonizing Identities: Race, Gender, and Indigeneity.” How are colonial legacies shaping histories and cultures of the United States and other modern nation-states the world over? What are the limits of civic nationalism? What histories of the marginalized can we recover as historians, humanists and social scientists? How do race, gender and indigeneity inform each other to make for a more critical investigation of culture, politics, society and history? Finally, what role does class play in our understanding of race, gender, and indigeneity? The conference organizers recognize that we live in transient and turbulent intellectual times and wish to invite graduate and advanced undergraduate students to present their research projects.

The History Students Association (HSA) will begin accepting Abstracts and Proposal submissions on December 15, 2017. We invite panels and papers that are: a) have conceptual and theoretical clarity b) clear disciplinary methods in textual analysis, ethnographic or archival research, and c) well written and presented. This will be an interdisciplinary conference (humanities and social sciences) and thus all majors are encouraged to submit paper proposals.

Submission Requirements: Individual submissions must include a 1-2 page long Abstract and a 1-2 page long Proposal. In your proposal, please indicate your topic, significance, and research process. Participants must indicate their status (Undergraduate, Graduate Student, Organizer, Professor, or Individual Scholar). Participants must submit a title for the presentation along with contact information. Abstracts/Proposals should be submitted electronically to hsa.conf@gmail.com, no later than 11:59pm on December 15, 2017.

Contact the HSA at hsa.conf@gmail.com with any questions or concerns.
