

About :: Chief Information Officer

The Chief Information Officer (CIO) holds university-wide responsibility for providing leadership in all aspects of campus information technology, including academic and administrative technologies and their associated supporting infrastructure and services. The CIO's Office works to develop information technology plans and policies with consultation from the campus community, and is Humboldt State University's principal point of contact with the California State University system and external organizations regarding information technology issues and activities. The CIO reports to the President and to the Provost, and serves on both the President's Executive Committee and the Council of Deans.
