20 years have passed since Julia Butterfly Hill’s tree-sit brought worldwide attention to a redwood named Luna. Shortly after Julia’s descent a vandal’s chainsaw failed to bring an end to Luna. Instead, the attack brought Luna back into the news. Today, this iconic redwood remains healthy, her message about sustainability is stronger than ever, and the world continues telling her story.

Sanctuary Forest works with its surrounding communities to conserve and restore forests and watersheds. This is accomplished through private and grant funded land purchases and restoration projects, by creating and monitoring conservation easements, and through an education program that includes public hikes, scholarships, and public meetings. THEY WILL HAVE A TABLE AT THIS EVENT.
